A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

"I have been practicing medicine for twenty years and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system."

MANKIND DIE POOR.

I have a secret I will tell you;
'Tis not good news, but it is always true;
Sad truth it is and will be evermore,
It is, that almost all mankind die poor.

Our ancestors worked hard their bread to win;
They had their sorrows, often mixed with sin;
What comes so hard goes easy from our store,
Fathers and children often all die poor.

Most men die poor—they did and always will,
A few shall rule, the rest must serve with skill.
A Joseph from the pit is lord of more
Than swarms of dark Egyptians dying poor.

Does farming pay? With wit and force combined
It surely is the farm that feeds mankind;
Farmers are richer round the world I'm sure,
But farmers often grumble, and die poor.

Only to work and save makes wealth abound,
A thousand ways to scatter tempt us round;
Little to get and many burdens sore,
And some get ugly that they should be poor.

Ah, well! who cares? All history surely tells,
They who have money do not have all else;
Each man may be a splendid soul I'm sure,
Where Christ and all the apostles died so poor.

All heaven's best gifts to men are freely given,
Life, joy, love, song, worship and hope of heaven;
Hosts of good fellows here and gone before,
And God's especial blessing on the poor.

Eternal forces given to his control,
God helping man he grows a splendid soul;
A miracle is wrought with hope of more,
Tell me, how can eternal hope die poor?

The great procession keeps its course sublime,
Wide as the world, long as the stream of time;
With heroes, saints and sages evermore,
All in the same old fashion, dying poor.

Even so, father, if thy will it be,
We bow our hearts right royal unto thee;
Thy children make life glorious evermore,
And so we die victorious and poor.
—James B. Wiggin in Cambridge Press.

AN AWFUL CHARGE.

The little combination freight and passenger train that runs from the entrance of the great Hoosac tunnel away up through the mountains along the bank of the Deerfield river waits patiently on its narrow gauge side track until its larger contemporary from Boston comes up and empties out whatever of its freight and whoever of its passengers are destined for the little villages farther up in the mountains. As soon as the Fitchburg train has pulled out of the station and into the tunnel the smaller combination is left master of the field, and, after backing coquettishly from its side track with many a puff and flutter and much ringing of a not untuneful bell, it starts sturdily around the curve and begins its journey of twelve miles over an upgrade track.

One quiet evening in the earlier part of July a young woman, accompanied by a girl who seemed to act in the capacity of maid rather than companion, alighted from the 5 o'clock train from Boston, made some inquiries of an official at the Fitchburg station and then made her way across the tracks to the other train which was waiting respectfully at a distance. Just as the train from Boston was about to start a young man came hurriedly to the platform of the car, looked earnestly across the tracks and then disappeared inside the car to return a moment later with a tan leather satchel, an umbrella and a cane. He looked nervous and annoyed, but crossed the tracks and climbed into the single passenger car on the narrow gauge road. The car was a combination passenger and baggage car, and he climbed in at the baggage car end. Presently the train backed from the side track and started along its up grade journey.

The young man took up a position before the open side door of the baggage end of the car and seemed to give himself up to admiration of the country through which they were passing, though he cast furtive glances into the other end of the car, where the young woman had taken her place. She was seated near the middle of the car, on the sunny side, and her maid was two or three seats behind her, with wraps and umbrellas and the various other paraphernalia that a fastidious young woman carries with her even on a short journey. Having made these observations the young man gave more perfect attention to the landscape and looked less frequently into the car proper. The girl was evidently unconscious of his presence, or at least unmindful of it. She looked steadily out of the window and seemed to be enjoying also the beautiful scenery.

But presently the young man began to grow more nervous and restive. He moved uneasily from his position to the open doorway and sat down on a box in the middle of the car. Then he went back to the door and leaned away out, looking up the track. Then he went back to the box again and arranged his four-in-hand nervously. Suddenly he got up and walked resolutely down the car to where the young woman was seated. He walked much in the manner of one who has determined to take a bath in very cold water and goes at it with his nerves at the sticking point and his eyes shut. The young woman was much interested in the landscape as he came up, and she did not notice him. He was obliged to call her attention.

"Grace," he said.

She turned from the window with wondering eyes and looked at him a moment. Then the light of recognition drove the wonder slowly from her eyes and she held out her hand languidly.

"Why, how do you do, Mr. Marden?" she said.

He took her hand slowly; he almost groped for it. He had been trying all the way from Boston to get up courage to speak to her, and now her cool, surprised "How do you do" was almost too much for him. There was not even a traceable note of resentment in it. There certainly was nothing of pleasure However, he pulled himself together and took the seat which she made for him beside her.

"It used to be 'Frank,'" he said in answer to her "Mr. Marden."

She laughed easily. "Oh, yes, but that was ever so long ago."

"It was long ago," said the young man; "it seems an age."

Miss Grenville made no reply. She sat there brown eyed and self contained, and presently looked out of the window again. The young man made another issue.

"What on earth brings you to this forsaken region?" he asked.

Miss Grenville looked at him inquiringly. "Is it forsaken?" she asked. "I think it is very pretty."

"Well, yes, pretty, but not—well—exciting."

"Do you like excitement?" asked Miss Grenville sweetly.

"I do not, but you do—or used to."

"Did I? I think I must have changed."

"Probably; you are changeable," said the young man very bitterly.

The young woman made no reply. Marden looked uncomfortably at his boots for awhile, then he made a third attempt.

"Will you please tell me where you are going, Grace?" he said.

Miss Grenville turned slowly from the window.

"I think you had better call me Miss Grenville," she said.

"Very well. Miss Grenville, will you please tell me where you are going?"

"Certainly. I am going to visit my aunt at Wilmington. And you?"

"I am going to Wilmington, too—on business."

"Are you? Then you must know about the coach from Readsboro?"

"Well—er—the fact is—I don't. I decided to go very suddenly - that is—I couldn't find out about the stage."

"Oh," said Miss Grenville.

"I have no doubt it will be all right," observed Marden, for want of anything better to say.

"Oh, no doubt," said Miss Grenville, perhaps for the same reason.

But when they arrived at the terminus of the road they found that it was not all right. The stage was there, but every available seat but one had been taken. It was growing late and Miss Grenville was in despair.

"You might go and let your maid come in the morning," suggested Marden heroically.

The maid was interviewed on this subject, but was fearful and obstinate. Then the young man made another suggestion. The maid might take the available place and he would drive Miss Grenville over. He was sure he could get a horse. He would have to do it on account of his business anyway. Miss Grenville defended her position, but finally surrendered. The maid took the place in the stage and Marden went in search of a horse.

Half an hour later, as the sun was going down behind the hills, a cadaverous looking horse, with almost a suspicious dislike to anything like haste, drew a single buggy out of Readsboro and along the pretty road toward Sadawga and Wilmington. They passed the outskirts of the village, and the road began to grow prettier and more closely hemmed in with trees. The cadaverous looking horse moved on with an uncertain jog that was a cross between a run, a trot and a walk. The result was a sort of hop. Miss Grenville made some attempts at conversation, but her companion rewarded her with silence. She made several uncomplimentary remarks about the horse which were witty enough for an ordinary occasion, but Marden did not smile—he did not seem to be paying attention; so finally she subsided into her side of the carriage and said no more. Presently Marden spoke.

"Grace," he said, "do you know why I am up here?"

Miss Grenville looked up innocently.

"Of course," she said. "You told me you had come on business."

"Which was not true, as you know. I came because I followed you from Boston."

"Frank, how dare you!" said Miss Grenville indignantly.

Marden went on quietly.

"And while I was standing out there in the baggage car"——

"I thought you were going to fall out of the door," continued Miss Grenville suddenly. Marden looked at her and then went on again quietly:

"You did not see me. You were surprised that I was on the train when I spoke to you."

"Oh!" said Miss Grenville.

"When I was standing in the baggage car I made up my mind that you would have to talk to me. I am more sure of it now. I have been trying to see you for two months, and you have been able to keep me from it. I know I am a brute, and that if you wanted to throw me over and not tell me why I ought to stand it, but I can't, and I'm through trying."

Miss Grenville laughed uneasily. A bough from one of the trees that skirted the road hung over within reach and she snatched a couple of its leaves as they passed.

"I wonder what kind of a tree that is?" she said. Marden took the green bough from her hand and threw it into the road.

"Grace," he said, "why did you throw me over?"

Miss Grenville looked around as if for some avenue of escape, but none presented itself and she leaned back again in the carriage.

"Perhaps," she said at length, "perhaps it is better to talk it over. Though (hurriedly) you know it can never make any difference now."

"Of course," admitted Marden, "I never dared to hope that."

"It is very hard to tell," continued Miss Grenville.

"Did you ever care for me?" asked Marden.

Miss Grenville looked at him with wondering eyes.

"Do you think that I wanted to do it?" she said.

Marden's face brightened wonderfully. "Do you mean that somebody forced you to give me up?" he asked.

"No, only I had to. One can't marry anybody when that person isn't what they thought he was," said little Miss Grenville, getting confused in her generalization, but with a very convincing air. Marden made no answer and his companion continued, "You know I always said that I never could marry anybody who was not perfectly gentlemanly and"——

"Do you mean that I am not a gentleman?" said Marden.

"Why, no, of course not. That was why I—why I liked you."

"Oh!"

"And I always thought you were the most perfect man in that respect."

"Thank you! I am very grateful; but will you tell me when it was that I failed to be what you thought me?"

"And I always thought you were the most generous and unselfish man I ever knew, and I am certain that I never had any reason to change that idea."

"Well?"

"And you know there was never anybody else that I cared for."

"Well?"

"You were always so handsome and so brave and—and—yes, I will say it—and so loving."

"Well?"

"So you must see that I could not have wanted to do it."

"Oh, but that does not explain why you did do it."

"I know it. Only it is so hard, and, Frank, you are not helping me a bit."

"I don't see why I need to. You were independent enough to throw me over and make me miserable for life."

"Have you been miserable, Frank?"

"I think I have almost died," said Marden solemnly.

"Have you? I have been miserable, too, Frank. And I have missed your steps and your voice and your laugh—I have missed your laugh very much, Frank."

"We used to have such pleasant times together, Grace."

"Yes, and mother says that the house sounds so lonely without you in the evening."

"I thought a great deal of your mother."

"I know you did. Yes, we did have happy times. I shall never forget them. And to think that now they are all over. I came up here because I hoped I would forget about it, and now (tearfully) you have brought it all back—again—and I know I shall go on feeling worse and worse—and"——

Poor little Miss Grenville fell to sobbing as if her heart would break. It was more than Marden could stand.

"Grace," he said, "don't. Let's patch it up in some way. Tell me what I did and let's fix it up."

"We can't," sobbed the young woman from her corner.

"Well, tell me anyway."

"It won't do any good, Frank, but I'll try if you say I must."

"You really must."

"I know you'll laugh at me and say I'm a goose. You always did do that."

"I will be sober as—as a prayer meeting," vowed the young man.

"Well, then, it was about that Miss Sanger. You know what you said about her."

"I know I must be very stupid, but I don't quite remember all about it. You had better tell me. Where did I see her?"

"At the pond, and it is really to your credit that you don't remember. I shall think of that and be grateful Frank, in after years. I said she was horrid, and you said she was clever and had beautiful eyes."

"I think I do remember now. She was the girl who had such a funny squint, wasn't she?"

"I don't think I ever noticed that, Frank."

"Well, she did. And she didn't know who Ibsen was. That was why I said she was clever and had beautiful eyes—I meant it the other way, you know."

"Did you really, Frank? Then I have misjudged you all this time."

Half an hour later Miss Grenville lifted a happy but tear stained face from Marden's shoulder and looked doubtfully up at him.

"Frank," she said.

"Well, sweetheart."

"I don't believe I know who Ibsen was either. Was he one of those horrid nihilists?"

"No, dear," said Marden, gravely, "he wasn't quite that; but I guess it doesn't make any difference now."—J. T. Newcomb in Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Amateur Astronomers.

The number of amateur astronomers is considerable, and it is safe to say that of all the sciences this is the one that can boast the most adepts among private persons. Among 1,160 astronomers now living, whose works have gained a footing in science, about half are amateurs with private observatories in England, including official establishments and those attached to the universities, there are 34 observatories in America, more than 80; in France 17; in Austria, 24; in Italy, 21; in Russia, 15, and in Belgium, 5.—L. SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

SONOMA. NOVEMBER 21, 1891.

THE Supreme Court has under consideration the legality of the San Francisco Grand Jury, the question having been raised before that tribunal by the Boodlers. A decision in the case is anticipated next Monday. For the sake of decency and honest administration of public affairs it is hoped by everyone, except those who have been guilty of bribery and corruption, that Judge Wallace and the Grand Jury will be sustained, to the end that political offenders, some of whom occupy high positions of public trust, will be ferreted out and punished. Should a contrary decision be rendered, an outrage will have been committed upon the people of the State of California that will arouse the indignation of every one in favor of honest government.

It is very common for the poor to envy the rich, and say, "If I only had such a one's wealth, how happy I would make those around me!" But money is only one of the many means of contributing to the enjoyment of others. If we reflect on the favors by which others have added largely to our own happiness we shall find that a large portion of them have been pure deeds of kindness which have cost the bestower little or nothing beyond the good disposition to perform them. Do not excuse yourself from the obligation to do something—in fact to do much—to make others happy on the ground that you are not rich. It is not a valid excuse. A smiling face and an encouraging, cheerful word to the afflicted and the troubled often go farther than all money can buy.

WHEN Miss Craven of San Jose went up to her apartment last Sunday night she was treated to the unpleasant sensation of seeing the arm of a man projecting from under the edge of her bed. She gave a scream, whereupon her uninvited guest sprang up and made his escape from a window. Her father appeared upon the scene just too late to capture the intruder, who was evidently bent upon burglary and had secreted himself until the inmates of the house should be asleep.

A stranger succeeded in passing a number of $5 and $10 silver certificates on Tacoma merchants last week. The $5 is of the series of 1886, with a large seal. The paper is said to lack the silver thread or any imitation thereof, but is otherwise a good counterfeit. The $10 bill is of the new series of 1890, and is a poor counterfeit.

THE War Department has concluded its experiments with American corn and has decided to recommend the use for the army of bread made of equal portions of corn and rye. It is believed the Interior Department will follow this example. Minister Phelps anticipated that this action will open the German markets to millions of bushels of American grain.

A DESICION rendered by the United States Supreme Court Monday practically holds that all solicitations for political purposes within Government buildings are unlawful. The effect, it is thought, will be to practically stop political assessments, and leave Government employes free to contribute or not, as they see fit.

It is constantly growing more apparent that the women of this age are terribly hampered by their costumes. A Detroit women tried to commit suicide by jumping off a ferry-boat the other day, but her skirts caught on the rail and she was saved.

FROM figures received by Secretary Scott of the Viticultural Commission, it is learned that the dry wine output for this year in the principal wine counties will be one-third short or about 7000 gallons less than the average yield.

Many men ruin themselves by interesting themselves in the welfare of others.

Flattery on the lips is equivalent to hatred in the heart.

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which chromatic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

Scrofula

Is more especially than any other a hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of fœtal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there

MRS. GRAHAM'S

CUCUMBER and ELDER FLOWER CREAM.

Is not a cosmetic in the sense in which that term is popularly used, but permanently beautifies. It creates a soft, smooth, clear, velvety skin, and by daily use gradually makes the complexion several shades whiter. It is a constant protection from the effects of sun and wind, and prevents sun burns and freckles, and blackheads will not come while you use it. It cleanses the face far better than soap and water, nourishes and builds up the skin tissues and thus prevents the formation of wrinkles. It gives the freshness, clearness and smoothness of the skin that you had when a little girl. Every lady, young or old ought to use it, as it gives a more youthful appearance to any lady, and that permanently. It contains no acid, powder or alkali, and is as harmless as dew and as nourishing to the skin as dew is to the flower. Price $1.00, at all druggists and hair-dressers, or at Mrs. Gervaise Graham's establishment, 104 Post Street San Francisco, where she treates ladies for all blemishes of the face and figure. Ladies at a distance treated by letter. Send stamp for her little book "How to be Beautiful."

THE HANNAH LOSEE WILL.

John R. Coopor Nominated Executor Without Bonds.

Mrs. Hannah Losee, widow of the late J. A. Losee, who died in this place last Monday, made the following will on the 19th day of last September, which was filed for probate yesterday in the Superior Court, Santa Rosa, by Robt. A. Poppe, attorney for the executor, John R. Cooper:

"I, Hannah Losee of Sonoma Valley and State of California, being of sound mind and memory, do make and publish and declare this my last will and testament in the manner following, to-wit:

First—I direct that my funeral expenses and just debts be paid by my executor, hereinafter named, out of my personal property, and that my body be buried by the side of my late husband, John A. Losee, in the cemetery at Petaluma, Cal.

Second—I give and bequeath and divise all my real and personal estate I may be possessed of at the time of my death to the following-named persons: My brother John Brickwell of Willow River, in the county of Pine and State of Minnesota; my sister, Elizabeth Hawkins of Birkenhead, Siskland, New Zealand, and my sister, Caroline Stone, of High Wycombe, in the county of Buckingham, England; Edward P. Death of Mrs. J. A. Losee.

Mrs. Losee, widow of the late J. A. Losee, died of old age at her home in this place last Monday night. The deceased lady had reached the advanced age of eighty years. She had been ill only a few days previous to her death. Mrs. Losee had resided in Sonoma continuously for twenty-one years. The remains of deceased were taken to Petaluma on Wednesday and interred beside those of her late husband in Cypress Hill Cemetery.

A Bold Robbery.

A bold robbery was committed at the home of the Majors near Santa Rosa, Monday night. Mrs. Majors, who was alone in the house with her children, had received a new gold watch from her husband in the afternoon, and on retiring at the usual hour that evening she placed the timepiece under her pillow. She had been sleeping but a short time when she was suddenly awakened and saw the body of a man just going through the window. She at first thought in her half-roused condition that one of the children was in her room, but reaching her hand under the pillow and not finding her new watch, she was wide awake in an instant and gave the alarm. Sheriff Mulgrew was notified early Tuesday morning of the theft, and he at once placed the city police in possession of the information, but no clue has as yet been discovered. Democrat.

The appraisers of the John Riebli estate have set a value of $1,088 on the same. An order has been filed in the Superior Court why the estate should not be set apart for the family.

AMMONIA IN BAKING POWDER.

Discussion Before the American Chemical Society.

(Chicago Tribune.)

To the Editor of The Tribune:—I have just seen the report in your issue of September 3 of the discussion at the Washington meeting of the American Chemical Society, August 18, relative to the use of carbonate of ammonia in baking powders.

This report is incomplete and incorrect in many particulars, and as the paper which precipitated the discussion was read by me and was based upon my own experiments I desire to make certain corrections in the interests of truth and for the benefit of the large number of your readers to which the question is one of great moment.

The paper as read before the society related that ammonia in baking powder is retained in the bread by reason of its affinity to the gluten. The concensus of opinion as expressed during the discussion was against the use of cabonate of ammonia in baking powder with the only exception of Dr. McMurtrie, who is now an employee of a baking powder company which uses carbonate of ammonia in its baking powder.

Of the other parties mentioned as having taken part in the discussion were Professor Dr. Baker, of the University of Pennsylvania, who is president of the society and one of our highest authorities. In answer to a pleading by Professor McMurtrie that only small quantities of ammonia were used in baking powders he stated: "No matter how small the quantity, I must decline to be dosed medically without my consent, when taking my meals."

Dr. E. H. Barbley, formerly chemist of the Brooklyn Board of Health and Professor of Chemistry at the Long-Island College, likewise named, did not, I believe, take active part in the discussion, but is already on record as strongly opposed to the use of ammonium carbonate in baking powders.

Dr. Richardson volunteered only the question whether the flour used in the experiments was of good quality, of which I assured him by stating that it was the best and the flour used in my family.

Professor Mallet was not present.

Your article is misleading in so far as it gives the impression that ammonia disappears on baking. My actual tests agree with those made by others, showing that ammonia remains in the bread. My investigations simply assign a new cause for its retention. H. ENDEMANN, Ph. D.—New York Tribune, Sept. 17, 1891.

NOTE.—Dr. Endemann, the writer of this communication, is well known in scientific circles, and was twelve years chemist of the New York Board of Health.

The baking powder company above referred to is the Royal Baking Powder Company of New York, and the employe Dr. William McMurtrie, who defends that company's use of ammonia, is their much advertised government athority. There is no such office known under our government as that of government or United States government chemist.

On Monday, the 16th, Governor Markham issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

During the past year the inhabitants of the State of California have enjoyed in a marked degree the blessings of health, peace and prosperity and have great cause to be thankful to the Almighty.

In testimony whereof I have hereto set my hand and caused the seal of the State to be affixed at the State Capitol, this the 16th day of November. 1891.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to clense the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Geo. Breitenbach went to Napa Thursday to attend the funeral of Miss Evelyn Packard, daughter of Mrs. O. C. Fly.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Duhring have returned from their visit to Southern California and are now at their home in San Francisco.

Mrs. Cassebohm and her niece Miss Mattie Goodman spent several days this week visiting friends in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Jo. Redding and Con Murray of Nacasio, Marin county, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wise.

A good attendance is promised at the ball to be given at Union Hall by the Young Men's Institute on Thanksgiving eve.

Mrs McIntyre, accompanied by her daughter Miss Ella, went to San Francisco on Wednesday afternoon's train for a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wise returned to their home near this place last Wednesday, after a week's visit with friends in Nacasio.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Hotz and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Pauli drove to Napa last Sunday, spending the day with friends in the above city.

The report that the City Market is to close is not true. The business is simply to change hands. Mr. Henry Weyl will in future conduct the same.

Mrs. Gabbler and her little daughter Amalia returned to their home in San Francisco Wednesday after a visit of several weeks with her sister Mrs. Ed. Wegner.

Next Wednesday evening, Thanksgiving eve, the Young Men's Institute will give a grand ball at Union Hall. Excellent music and a fine supper have been provided. Let all attend.

W. B. Pless entertained a party of Sonoma friends on the dredger Nevada last Monday. Among those present were Mrs. R. J. Keogh, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Granice, Miss Dora V. Howe and Miss Willie Akers.

Sunday night the Rhine Farmers and their guests enjoyed a very pleasant hay ride, probably the last of the season. Though the night was quite chilly the party seemed to enjoy the ride immensely, for the merry laughter and melodious songs could be plainly heard as they passed through town. Among the party were: Misses Tillie Rohte, Neta Schilling and Bertha Gundlach, (only a few of 'em left) Messrs. Rohte, Stranch, Vega, Stauf, Muecke, Frauenholz and Gundlach.

The social given last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Union Hall by the ladies of the Congregational Church was in every way a success. Tuesday evening a large crowd were present and in consequence the different booths were well patronized. The programme, although short, was well received. The stage was prettily decorated with choice flowers, flags and tall ferns. Wednesday evening the rain kept many from attending, but those who were present were pleasantly entertained. Prof. Watson had charge of the programme and deserves much credit for providing an unusual interesting entertainment, which consisted of several beautiful tableaux, a number of recitations and a chorus of female voices. The ladies realized a neat little sum of money which will be used for the benefit of the church.

THE BOSS HUNTER.

He Bags $5 Worth of Game in One Shot.

An Italian named Dellargo, living near this place, is the boss hunter of Sonoma valley. With one discharge of his trusty gun, one day this week, he bagged five dollars worth of game. Dellarga had been out hunting and meeting with poor success, he espied a chicken in the road near F. Demartini's residence in the western suburbs of town. Bringing his shot-gun to his shoulder he took a snap shot at the fowl, with the result that the chicken a few minutes after was reposing in his game bag. Dellarga was delighted. Not so, however, the owner of the defunct fowl, Mr. Demartini, who immediately proceeded to town and swore out a warrant for the arrest of the offending hunter, charging him with malicious mischief in killing his chicken. Dellarga was arrested by Constable Sparks and brought before Justice Cheney yesterday morning, and seeing that the 'jig was up" plead guilty to the charge registered against him and paid a fine of $5 like a little man. He had chicken for dinner, however. Dellarga avers that he won't go gunning for other people's chickens for some time yet to come.

Deafness can't be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is no hing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How to Ride Through Water.

A military journal of Paris, The Revue du Cercle Militaire, gives this account of the way a horse should not be ridden, and of the way he should be ridden, in swimming a stream.

To begin with, it must not be supposed that a horse always swims naturally and with ease the moment he is off his feet in the water. The animal under such circumstances has but one notion, to keep his head out of the water and to lift his shoulders as high as possible.

In doing this his hindquarters sink and he finds himself almost standing upon his tail, or at least in a position three-quarters erect.

In such a position, if the rider draws upon the reins or throws his body back in the least, the animal's hindquarters will sink more and more, his body will take a vertical position, and beating the water uselessly with his forefeet he will finally sink.

As soon as the horse gets off his feet in the water let the rider grasp a handful of the animal's mane, leaning at the same time well forward upon his shoulders, but without touching the horse's head. The rider's knees should be pressed tightly to the horse's sides, otherwise he is likely to be swept off by the water.

This is the only position which will enable a man to remain in the saddle and the horse to swim at the same time.

The reins must be held loosely and each well to one side. If the horse is to be guided in the water give the loose rein a little jerk in the direction desired. But it is in the highest degree important never to pull on the reins.

The Arab's Pride in His Horse.

Arabian horses need no praise. Of the many beautiful stories told of the Arabs that given in the well known poem, "Achmid and His Mare," surpasses all. Achmid had a mare of wondrous speed and guarded it with jealous care. A robber stole her, leaped upon her back and shouted to Achmid to catch her if he could. Achmid and his tribe mounted and went in hot pursuit. Suddenly the thought came to him, "If I overtake my mare she is then outrun, she will lose her fame." Shouting to the robber, "Quick, pinch her ear!" he revealed the secret sign his darling knew so well. Achmid lost his mare, as he knew he would, but her glory was secure.

I knew that if her ear be nipped
The darling prize could never be outstripped.

Feminine Humor.

The people who have sometimes uttered the very unsafe generalization that "women have no sense of humor" must be unacquainted with the genuine American girl, whose gift for a sort of humor which almost seems to be the peculiar property of this country—comical comparisons and odd exaggerations—is beyond doubt very great. A certain young New York girl of eighteen is well known to her friends to possess this sense of humor. Of a particularly haughty and repellent woman she remarked, "She steps as if the ground were not good enough for her to walk on; and, therefore, she always wears rubbers?" Youth's Companion

WHY HE WANTED TO BE A HEATHEN.

Little Robbie Tended the Baby Faithfully, but He Didn't Like Them.

There were eight of the young Daers, and my friend Robbie was number six. He is a sturdy little fellow, with faded flaxen hair—he won't wear a hat—and a very pink face liberally spattered with big brown freckles. It has been the business of Robbie's life to "tend the baby," and what a relentless tyrant that baby seemed to be! All day long Robbie played with it and waited upon it and pushed it around in the rickety perambulator which has been occupied successively by all the Daer infants.

One hour, and one only, in the day was he free, that was during the baby's nap. Then how Robbie gloried in his emancipation! Into that brief hour he tried to compress all the fun that other small boys spread over the whole twenty-four. It was exhilarating to watch him enjoy himself.

"When the baby's bigger," Robbie told me one day, "then I'll go to school 'n learn to count, like Bert; 'n I'll have a coat with pockets, like Jo's; 'n I'll sell papers 'n make money, same as Fred does. But I haf to stay at home 'n tend the baby now, cos mother's too busy. After the baby's bigger I'll get to go 'n play ball on Saturdays, 'n I'm go'n to buy me a bat like Bert's. Oh, I'll have lots of fun after the baby's bigger!"

But one afternoon, while the baby took his nap, Robbie failed to devote himself to enjoyment with his usual fervor. I saw him sitting on the porch steps all alone, with a wrinkled brow and eyes fixed upon the ground.

"What's the matter, Robbie?" I asked. "Why aren't you playing?"

"Oh—cos!"

"Are you sick?"

"Nome."

"Have you been bad?"

"Nome."

"Come tell me what's the trouble."

Robbie rose slowly, still frowning, and thrust his hands deep into his knickerbockers—he had no pockets, poor boy! As he approached me I could see that he was trying hard not to cry.

"Say," said he at last, with great solemnity, "do you love God? Mother does."

"Every one loves God, Robbie, except wicked people and the heathen."

"What's heathen?"

I explained.

"Do you think God's smart?" His eyes were fixed on the ground as he asked.

"Why, Robbie?"

He looked up with desperation on his face.

"Well, I don't!" he exclaimed. "Guess I'll haf to go 'n be a heathen. God's sent us another baby—'n I'm just disgusted with him!"—Amy Elizabeth Leigh in Kate Field's Washington.

The Professional Beggar.

The professional beggar must be a man of some ability and he requires years of study and practice to make the occupation profitable. He must be a man of some originality, for the American people prefer variety even in the tales of woe told by the street beggars. The men who achieve success in the business are proud of their profession and rather enjoy being caught now and then. No part of the city is free from the frauds who are collecting the living they claim the world owes them. They visit every block and probably every house from the Battery to the Harlem river.

During the day they work among the fashionable residences up town and the wholesale districts down town. In the evening they swarm along upper Broadway, mingling with the throng of well dressed theater goers and promenaders. It is there they reap their richest harvest from the out of town people, who are seeing the sights and have usually seen enough of them at that hour to feel as though they would be glad to relieve all the poverty and suffering in the world.—New York Cor. Chicago Herald.

The Use of Metaphor.

A speaker who attempts to use nautical metaphors should be thoroughly familiar with the sea and the working of a ship or he will strand his speech. A clergyman was supplying a pulpit by the seaside. Thinking to impress the truth more distinctly upon the congregation, many of whom were seamen, he drew the figure of a ship trying to enter a harbor against a head wind.

Unfortunately for the success of his metaphor, he knew little of seamanship. After putting the ship into several singular positions, he cried out in a voice intended to be emphatic:

"What shall we do next?"

"Goodness only knows," exclaimed a disgusted old tar, "unless you let her drift starn foremost!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Sign of Equality.

Mathematical readers will be interested in the following quotation from Robert Recorde, who introduced the sign of equality into algebra.

Recorde was the first English author who wrote on the subject of algebra. In his treatise called "Whetstone of Witte," published about 1557, he says: "To avoide the tedioune repetition of these words, is equalle to, I will sette, as I doe often in worke use, a paire of parallel lines of one lengthe, thus: —, because no 2 thynges can be more equalle."—Youth's Companion.

His Ambition.

"What are you going to be when you grow up, Harry?" asked Uncle John.

"Somebody's uncle," returned Harry.—Harper's Bazar.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at the time was not able to walk across the street without resting. "August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been affected with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure." ④

THE Bravest 500 OF '61,

A Wonderful Book made from the records of the War Department.

COMPILED BY BVT. BRIG.-GEN. T. F. Rodenbough.

Of the 2,778,304 men enlisted in the Union Army and Navy, 1861-5, a little less than 500 were especially recognized by the War Dept., as coming under the Act of Congress, July 12, 1862, for distinguished bravery, which gave them the United States Medal of Honor.

Many of the stories, told by the heroes themselves, of how they won the high distinction, are extremely interesting. That the records of these deeds are almost unknown to their countrymen, but lie buried in the pigeon holes of the War Dept., and in the recesses of their own breasts, seems astonishing.

This book must find a wide sale, for it is full of incidents that will interest every old soldier in the land, and our boys will glory in it. It is a 8vo volume of over 500 pages, with nearly 100 excellent illustrations, made specially for the work.

It rocks of its time and deserves a place in the library of all who would not altogether forget the glorious past.
